Our Approach

While anger is a strong emotion, signaling that a pressing problem must be addressed, it is also the driving force behind arguments & aggressive behavior.

Reducing the ineffective handling of anger is the major objective of EAC Network's Anger Management Program.

Who conducts the Program?

A trained and experienced facilitator presents the course work and introduces participants to several appropriate behavior self-management techniques including problem solving, social skills training and behavior reversal.

Do participants receive any long-term help?

Yes. A screener will assess each participant and determine if they require more intensive professional evaluation and intervention. An additional referral to a mental health or community agency will be made on behalf of participants where indicated.
